FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

European Communications BY MAJ. GEN. O. P. NEWMAN, USA Commanding General, Base Section, USAREUR

THE Berlin Blockade, coupled with the anticipated build-up of US forces in Europe as part of the NATO Defense program, led to a careful examination in early 1950 of the problem of establishing an alternate Line of Communications (LOC). Since World War II all supplies and troops had been funneled in through Bremerhaven, an enclave in the British Zone of Germany, located on the North Sea and less than an hour away from the Elbe River. A survey team was appointed and determined that France, with her extensive coast lines and numerous first-class ports for the debarkation of troops and the handling of vital supplies, was the logical place for the new LOC. In addition, her excellent rail and road networks connected these ports directly to the Rhine River and our combat forces in Germany. Our requirements were determined and agreements made with the French government to permit the establishment of the Communications Zone (ComZ), which included all of France. The Base Section of the Communications Zone, more com-

Marine NonComs Will Carry Swagger Sticks

Marine Corps Staff NonComs—top three-graders—soon will be allowed to carry swagger sticks, just like officers.

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., USMC, Commandant, has given the go-ahead. Now the Uniform Board must find a suitable stick, one that probably won't be expensive as the $7 French hand-polished rosewood stick carried by officers.

NCO sticks will be tipped with brass and have a miniature gold Marine Corps emblem at the carrying end. They will be 22 inches long.

It's expected that, though optional, carrying of swagger sticks by Staff NonComs will be "encouraged."

SecDef Wilson Creates Ad Hoc Group For Pay Inquiry: Greater Spread Seen

Prospects for a Pentagon-sponsored military pay raise request in the 84th Congress, which convenes in January, have been strengthened.

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson is getting his facts and figures on the military pay situation in line well in advance in order to permit necessary consultation with the Budget Bureau and the President.

The Pentagon chief has created a special ad hoc committee on military pay to do the fiscal spadework. Its chairman is Capt. Joseph B. Hoyt, USNR.

Other members of the all-Service group include Col. E. L. Brinkman, USA; Cdr.

H. F. Fisher, USN; Maj. S. A. Lemley, USAF; and Maj. A. H. Sawyer, USMC.

Findings of the Hoyt Committee are expected to provide the foundation for the Pentagon's military pay program. This may be featured by a proposal to realign pay scales in order to provide greater incentive for attainment of higher enlisted and officer ranks.

In this connection, it is recalled that the Womble Report, which Mr. Wilson in effect endorsed when he transmitted it to the President, contended that an adverse career attractiveness factor was the contraction in the military pay spread (Please turn to Page 123)

ARMY'S BIG WEEK

The Army has had one of its biggest weeks in peacetime history. Newly-disclosed developments will have a far-reaching effect on utilization of manpower and weapons procurement and employment.

●Unit rotation will start this summer.

●The Army shortly will organize two new infantry divisions, and in the next two years will convert five training divisions to tactical T.O.&E.'s — making a total of 24.

●A contract for $160,601,200 for FY '55 production of the M48 Patton medium tank has been awarded.

●Pilot line production will begin on a new Army long-range missile — Redstone — still under security wraps.

Air Force Chiefs See Mock-Up of Speedy Jet "Courier" For Flying Headquarters

The Air Force, in a step designed to accelerate the command efficiency of its top force chiefs, such as the heads of SAC, TAC and ADC, may purchase a number of Martin B-57B converted twin-jet bombers.

They would be the nation's first jet-powered flying headquarters.

Air Force leaders, headed by Secretary Harold E. Talbott and General Nathan F. Twining, this week inspected a mock-up of a Martin B-57B conversion.

The conversion shown at the National Airport, Washington, D. C., changes the night intruder into a comfortable, but high speed, transport for eight passengers. Three airline-type arm chairs are lined up along the starboard side, while on the port side is another such chair and a long couch equipped with four seat belts. Another version would have two additional seats in place of the couch, reducing the seating arrangement to six.

It was estimated that the head of one major command who might normally take seven days to visit a given number of his bases could make the same trip in three days with the "Courier."

The mock-up was shown with a wash basin, lavatory, small galley, and clothes closet. Three small windows are provided on each side of the compartment.

The conversion has an access door from the passenger compartment to the second crewman's cockpit. However, in flight this door may be secured air tight. Pressurization in the crew compartment and passenger compartment is separate.

The B-57A is the U. S. Air Force version of the English Electric Canberra which has set records for trans-Atlantic crossings. The American version is built by the Glenn L. Martin Company of Baltimore, Md. The B-57B is a redesigned version with an improved canopy for greater visibility, a redesigned cockpit, and is fitted with speed brakes.

ARMY-AIR FORCE DISPUTE SEEN LIKELY

Sharpened disagreement between the Army and Air Force concerning the percentage of the defense budget which should go for troop transport and tactical aircraft appears likely with the disclosure that the Army plans to increase its number of combat divisions.

It is no secret top Army officials were concerned when the celebrated unfolding of the "New Look" showed the only numerical change in the Air Force combat wings structure was elimination of six troop carrier units—difference between the 143-wing goal and the current 137-wing objective.

If the Army objected to such a cut in troop transport strength when it had 20 combat divisions and was told the new objective would be 17, there's little reason to doubt that General Matthew B. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, will be arguing strongly for more troop transport and tactical aircraft support for 24 divisions in deliberations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The Air Force certainly would be delighted to provide additional strength for TAC, provided enough funds for aircraft procurement would be forthcoming to prevent any pinch on SAC and ADC.

One Third of Army Will Be On The Move Each Year; Family Separations Decline

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens and General Matthew B. Ridgway, Chief of Staff, conferred with President Eisenhower at Lowry AFB, Colo., on 28 Sept., and, at a hastily summoned Pentagon news conference, disclosed the next day plans to start unit rotation next summer.

Simultaneously, the Secretary announced the Army will activate two new divisions from non-divisional units and will convert five training divisions into combat organizations over the next two years. Unless these plans are upset in budget councils or on Capitol Hill, this will mean a "long-haul" peacetime Army of 24 combat-type divisions, compared with 17 originally slated for Active Army service as of 30 June 1955.

There's a possibility a sixth training division also will be converted, which would make 25 divisions.

Secretary Stevens said unit rotation is expected to result in the shift overseas of four divisions each year and the return to the U. S. of an equal number. Thus, one-third of the Army's combat divisions will be involved in unit rotations each year.

Here's a look-ahead at what the plan means to the Army as a whole and to individual officers, warrant officers and enlisted men.

THE ARMY

Here is how the New Army will emerge.

First, two new divisions are to be activated. One is the 23d Infantry Division, with headquarters at Ft. Amador, Canal Zone, which will include the regimental combat teams in the Canal Zone, Puerto Rico and Ft. Benning, Ga.

The second new division will be the 71st Infantry Division, with headquarters at Ft. Richardson, Alaska, and including two RCT's now in Alaska and a third RCT at Ft. Lewis, Wash.

Then, over the next two years, five of the Army's six training divisions, if not all of them, will be converted into combat-type divisions.

The line-up for the 24 divisions will include the present two airborne units, the 82d at Ft. Bragg, N. C., and the 11th at Ft. Campbell, Ky., four armored divisions, including the 1st and 4th at Ft. Hood, Tex., and the 2d Armored in Europe, plus one of the training divisions, and 18 infantry divisions.

General Ridgway told reporters that, as at the present, the nine divisions overseas—5 in Europe, 3 in the Far East and 1 in Hawaii—will be maintained in top combat readiness. He said that 3 of the divisions in the ZI also would be maintained on a "ready to go" basis, the same number as at present.

Overall, General Ridgway said that under the new plan, with the elimination of training divisions, the combat effectiveness of the Army's divisions will be higher than at present, but he freely conceded at a news conference that a number of the divisions in the ZI "would be pretty much bogged down" with a training requirement.

The conversion of the five training divisions, Secretary Stevens explained, will give the Army "a sufficient balance of divisions between home and abroad to permit their rotation."

THE SOLDIER

For the individual soldier, the unit rotation plan—called Operation Gyroscope*—will mean greatly improved stability in his personal life, highlighted by fewer family separations, recognized as one of the primary adverse morale factors in contemporary military life.

"The new rotation system," said Secretary Stevens, "will go far toward eliminating some of the most undesirable of present conditions of service, and will enhance unit pride and esprit throughout the Army."

The Secretary reported that some soldiers may elect to spend their entire career with a single division.

He said that Gyroscope planning calls for Army personnel to spend about 33 months overseas and 31 months on duty in the United States.

Secretary Stevens and General Ridgway stressed that the divisions will have a permanent State-side station, so that military families will be able to put down firm roots in a community. This stability will be an important advantage in rooting out such matters as purchase of a home and education of children.

Also, as the plan unfolds, it can be expected that housing overseas will become so settled that concurrent travel will be easily attained, at least for troops moving to Europe.

"Rotation with Stability," says the Army.

K.P. May Fly AF But Army Says No

The Army will keep K.P. on the active list for soldiers in the United States indefinitely.

That's the word from Secretary Robert T. Stevens and General Matthew B. Ridgway, Chief of Staff.

They were asked—by a lady reporter—at a Pentagon news conference this week whether K.P. would be abolished. General Ridgway smiled and said no he didn't think so. The Secretary also smiled and agreed.

The Chief of Staff remarked that the Air Force was studying the possibility of using civilian help in mess halls (a test was started this summer at Vance AFB, Okla.), but he said the Army has no similar plans.

Readiness To Use A-Bomb Told To NSIA By Generals Gruenther And Shepherd

Plans and training for the use of Atomic bombs were described to members of the National Security Industrial Association this week in New York City by General Alfred M. Gruenther, USA, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe and General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps.

General Gruenther declared that the use of the Atomic bomb by the Western powers is the only way they can offset the balance and the greater numerical superiority of Russia and her satellites.

The General also stated that the new Red propaganda line against the Atomic bomb is having a stronger effect on opinion in Europe than in the past. The Reds, he said, have been putting themselves in the light of seeking to bar the use of the Atomic bomb to prevent the killing of women and children. We have not yet been successful in meeting this propaganda line, he said.

General Gruenther reported that the state of training as shown in this year's European maneuvers is very encouraging. The problem of operating with diversified nationalities as a unit has been completely solved militarily, he declared. Simulated atomic weapons were employed in the maneuvers and while some corrections are needed the overall efficiency was high.

General Gruenther left New York for St. Paul, Minn., where he will accept an honorary degree from the College of St. Thomas.

General Shepherd told the NSIA members that the Marine Corps is developing revolutionary new concepts of combat based on the use of nuclear weapons in the air, and surface landing operations. This concept, he said, is based on our Nation's command of the seas and the air above them and permits a power and flexibility not available to a continental foe such as Russia.

No Fast Shuffle For Free Cards

Soldiers, sailors and marines apparently go in for poker and bridge on a heavier scale than airmen.

At least that's the inference that can be drawn from disclosure Air Force depots in the U. S. are stuck with an excess of decks—known officially as straight deck-SN7860-101000, unit: dk.

The Air Force has authorized ZI to issue overseas installations any amount of the playing cards requested.

After 1 December the card decks remaining in depot stock will be distributed to the other Services or be disposed elsewhere.

AIA Plans Symposium

A National Symposium on Titanium Standards will be held by the Aircraft Industries Association in Cleveland, Ohio, 11-12 Oct.

Numerous Defense Department representatives are expected to attend. They will include Maj. Gen. Kern D. Metzger, USAF, Col. R. W. Green, USAF, and Mr. J. H. Garrett, DoD representative, as well as others from the Air Research and Development Command, Army Ordnance and the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics. Discussion topics will embrace problems of fabrication and working of Titanium alloys and increasing the output of Titanium.

AIR FORCE PROMOTIONS ON SCHEDULE

The Air Force officer temporary promotion program for FY '55 is "right on schedule," a Pentagon spokesman reported late this week. This means that command quotas for promotions to captain—the largest single group of advancements—have gone out to the field.

The schedule calls for the major quotas to go out from Washington at the end of this month and those for lieutenant colonel and colonel at the end of November.

In turn, major commanders have been instructed to send names of those recommended for captain to USAF Headquarters by 15 October, with recommendations for major due 15 November and those for lieutenant colonel and colonel by 10 December.

(Select Regular AF Captains, P. 129)

NEED MORE OFFICERS

Redesignation of training divisions as tactical organizations will create a need for additional Army officers.

The tables of organization for a combat division call for 946 officers and 169 warrant officers. Officer strength in training divisions varies according to the number of men in training, but averages about 500 officers and 50 warrant officers.

Army Will Promote About 1,000 In Oct.

Unofficial estimates indicate that the Army will promote about 1000 officers to captain and major during October.

It is believed that there will be roughly 800 boosts to captain, with all those recommended for promotion to that rank by boards which met in the Spring to be advanced by the end of November.

The current selections to major probably will be exhausted during October.

V-2 Rocket Father Leads Development Work On Army's Newest Missile—L/R Redstone

Its characteristics and capabilities still shrouded in secrecy, the Army's newest guided missile, Redstone, will be placed in "limited production" by the Chrysler Corporation at a Navy-owned jet engine plant in Warren, Mich., near Detroit. Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens reported this week the award of an $855,000 contract for this purpose.

A Pentagon announcement said production "will begin as soon as practicable." Named for Redstone Arsenal, Ala., where Army Ordnance designed and is perfecting the weapon, the new missile is credited largely to research directed by Dr. Werner von Braun, the famed German scientist who developed the V-2.

Secretary Stevens and Assistant Army Secretary Frank H. Higgins were wary of disclosing any details concerning Redstone, but acknowledged that it is a long-range ground-to-ground missile. Its power plant is built by the Northrop Corporation.

Redstone will be the Army's third guided missile. The other two are Nike, used in antiaircraft defense, and the Corporal, developed for battlefield employment.

Army Picks Chrysler Over GMC For M48 Tank Contract, Production Starts In June

The Chrysler Corporation will begin production at its Newark, Dela., Tank Plant next June on orders for $160,601,200 worth of Patton M48 medium tanks.

The contract award was announced by Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens at his news conference on 29 Sept. This is the largest single item in the Army's $266,600,000 vehicle procurement program announced last July.

It came hard on the heels of contract awards of $35,000,000 to the Cadillac Division of General Motors Corporation for M42 twin-40mm. self-propelled guns and $26,500,000 for M59 Armored Infantry Vehicles from the Ford Machinery Corporation.

The self-propelled guns will be built at the Cleveland Tank Plant, the Armored Infantry Vehicles at San Jose, Calif.

The M48 contract went to Chrysler as a result of a bid which was $7,600,000 lower than that of the Fisher Body Division of General Motors, which is presently building the M48, and an unspecified amount below the bid of the American Locomotive Company.

The Chrysler plant at Newark built the M48 until last July, when it lost the contract to the Fisher plant.

The Army said that production at Newark would begin in June 1955 and that the Fisher plant will continue present production until at least 1 June 1955.

The Continental Engine Co. of Muskegon, Mich., builds the M48 engine.

USMC Reserve Policy Board Makes Ten Recommendations: SecNav O.K.'s Eight

The present "running mate" system of promotion for Reserve officers of the Marine Corps should be retained, the Marine Corps Policy Board has recommended.

The Board, headed by Maj. Gen. Joseph C. Burger, USMC, which met from 7 to 18 June, also made nine other recommendations affecting Reserve policy matters.

Regarding the Board's position on the "running mate" system, Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas noted that no action on the recommendation is necessary in light of the recent passage of Public Law 773. "It is my desire, however," he said, "that any future legislation embodying major departures from the present system for assigning precedence or affecting the promotion of Marine Corps Reserve officers be first submitted to a Marine Corps Reserve Policy Board for its consideration and recommendation."

The Board also recommended that:

1. obligors not be compelled to affiliate with the Organized Reserve,

2. strong representations be made by appropriate agencies to continue in force the provisions of the Armed Forces Act of 1952, which permits Standby Reservists to serve in the Organized Reserve,

3. the Secretary of Defense be requested to institute a more comprehensive and continuing public educational program on UMT, the Armed Forces Reserve Act, and regulations pertinent to obligors and Reservists,

4. the policy of requiring a Naval Reserve officer to serve a period in a non-pay status upon affiliating with an Organized Marine Corps Reserve unit pending the approval of his application should be changed to permit retroactive assignment as of the date of his initial participation with the unit,

5. assignment of medical officers of the Army and Air Force Reserve to Organized Marine Corps Reserve units in a pay status be authorized where Naval Reserve medical officers are unavailable for such duty,

6. "on-the-job" training periods at home facilities authorized for a limited number of members of Organized Reserve units prior to annual field training,

7. Browning automatic rifles, light machine guns, 60mm mortars, and 3.5" rocket launchers be provided all Organized Reserve Ground units for instructional purposes, and further, that a study be made as to whether additional weapons and equipment should be provided to these units for the same purpose,

8. members of Volunteer Training Units be awarded the Organized Marine Reserve Medal upon completion of four consecutive years as members of such units during which time they have earned 60 retirement points per year and performed four periods of active duty for training, and,

9. a Marine Corps study to determine the feasibility of activating auxiliary air units or sub-units at distant airfields or at the parent Naval Air Station when the strength of the presently organized units warrant such activation. Along these lines, the Board also proposed that the possibility of payment to personnel on a 12 and 24 drill basis be studied.

Navy Secretary Thomas has given approval to all of the Board's recommendations with the exception that he disapproved of the proposal to award the Organized Marine Corps Reserve Medal to members of volunteer training units upon completion of specified periods of service. He said that the proposed requirements which must be met in order to qualify for the medal do not parallel the "rigid requirements" which must be met by members of the Organized Marine Corps Reserve. "The establishment of such criteria," the Navy Secretary said, would tend "to cheapen the award."

In approving the recommendation to assign Army and Air Force Reserve medical officers to Marine Corps Reserve units, Secretary Thomas noted that his approval was subject to the concurrence of those Departments.

Such assignments, he said, are not to be made until the cognizant Naval District Commander has determined that Naval Reserve medical officers are not available for the posts. The assignment of Army and Air Force officers to these posts, Secretary Thomas continued, are conditioned by the provision that they are to be detached with a notice not to exceed six months, whenever a Naval Reserve medical officer becomes available.

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Marine Corps Commandant, has been authorized to include a request for funds in budget estimates to provide for "on-the-job" training for a limited number of members of Organized Reserve units who will report a few days before the beginning of annual field training periods. The extra few days will permit greater participation in field training by all members of the unit. At present, a small number of unit members are needed to perfect final details in order to get the unit ready for training. Administrative details, such as issuing

AU SPURS AF WRITING-SPEAKING PROGRAM

A program designed to stimulate and encourage writing talent in the Air Force has been launched by the Air University.

As outlined by Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, USAF, Commander of the Air University, the writing program is designed to "catch up on the lag in air power literature in book form, journals and papers."

Writing in the September issue of Pegasus, published by the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp., General Kuter says "Everyone who has a sound knowledge of air power should be encouraged to write what he knows, so that this knowledge may be spread."

Due to lack of facilities for professional graduate-level education, the Air Commander notes, it is "mandatory that the bulk of the officers in the Air Force learn about their profession from the writings and speaking of others."

Although there are thousands of volumes on Army, Marine Corps and Naval warfare, General Kuter remarks, "The short history of aviation has burst upon us with such suddenness that literature has not kept up with its breathtaking advance."

All Air Force officers are "being encouraged to speak and to write for publication on Air Force subjects," he says, and "Emphasis is being given to the Air University press as an agency to publish and disseminate material on air power."

The writing program, he adds, is expected to provide airmen "with additional knowledge on subjects of air power" and at the same time "develop a better general understanding both within and outside the Air Force. We think our efforts towards a better knowing, better speaking, better writing group will develop a more efficient Air Force and foster our own and public understanding of our vital mission."

Pentagon May Ask Military Pay Changes As Part of Raise Request Next Year

The Womble Committee study showed that enlisted men and officers, rising through the ranks, could not hope to win pay advances comparable to those which existed prior to passage of WWII and postwar pay legislation.

Lending force to speculation that military pay scales may be revamped is the fact that the Armed Forces are in a unique situation. For the first time in its history, the United States is maintaining Uniformed Services of roughly 3,000,000 men and women in peacetime.

This is being accomplished by use of the draft, and there are many in high Pentagon places who feel that men brought into active duty for relatively short periods should not be paid as much as those who volunteer and who make military service a career.

Aside from the pay philosophy involved here, the hard cash reality is that a military pay boost concentrated largely on NonCom and Field Grade officers and above would cost possibly half the amount or less than an across-the-board pay hike.

The fact that 1955 will not be an election year makes it an ideal time for the presentation of such a pay revision plan, according to some Pentagon observers.

They point out that the Administration might well favor such a realignment in pay scales, since the same approach was employed in the Administration's plan for changes in postal workers' pay.

Therefore, the Hoyt Committee's work has been shrouded in secrecy; in fact no announcement of its creation was made at the Pentagon.

It can be expected also that official details of the Ad Hoc Committee inquiry will not be released until the group presents its findings to Mr. Wilson.

However, the obvious fact is that the Defense Secretary intends to have the full story on military pay in his hands prior to the convening of Congress.

Then, should a concerted effort be made to secure a pay raise for the Government's civilian employees—and this is expected—Mr. Wilson will be ready to plug for a pay raise for persons in uniform.

FIRST LADY VISITS A FAVORITE DOLL HOUSE

Youngsters of the Lowry AFB, Colo., Nursery School and Kindergarten proudly displayed two of their most prized possessions—a doll house and a miniature farm—to a very distinguished visitor recently.

The visitor was Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower. The playthings were gifts she had given to the school three years ago.

Mrs. Eisenhower, who came at the invitation of Mrs. John T. Sprague, wife of the Lowry Commander, and Mrs. Robert A. Bryant, nursery school director, spent an enjoyable visit talking with the three- and four-year-olds, watching them at play and joining in their singing and nursery rhymes.

The children, all dependents of Lowry personnel, were attending the morning nursery school session.

Still in almost perfect condition, the doll house given by Mrs. Eisenhower shortly after she and President Eisenhower returned from Europe in 1950, is completely furnished and has two stories. (Photo Page 138)

Senate Committee Berates Sen. McCarthy For Treatment of Brig. Gen. Ralph Zwicker

A select committee of the Senate has recommended censure of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wisc.) on two counts: (1) contempt of the Senate and (2) "reprehensible" conduct toward Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, USA.

In ruling that Senator McCarthy "should be censured by the Senate" for his conduct "toward General Zwicker," the Committee said:

1—"We feel that it was evident that his examination was unfair, and that General Zwicker testified as fully and frankly as he could do, in view of the Presidential and Army directives which restricted his freedom of expression. These directives were known to his examiners, and however much they may have been out of sympathy with the directives, the fact remains that this was no excuse for berating General Zwicker and holding him up to public ridicule."

2—"There is no evidence that General Zwicker was intentionally irritating, evasive or arrogant. . . . The insistence that the witness answer long hypothetical questions and questions that are not clear even upon careful inspection and reflection, was much more the source of any resulting irritation on the part of the examiner than any conduct on the part of the witness."

3—"There are few safeguards for the protection of witnesses appearing before

Army's Senior MSC Officer Returns To Sch.

College study, interrupted in 1917 by WWI, will be resumed in February by Col. Edward M. Wones, MSC, USA-Ret., who ended his service at Brooke Army Medical Center, Tex., on 30 Sept., as senior officer in length of service in the Medical Service Corps.

Colonel Wones, since 1949, the Inspector General of the medical center, will return to Illinois State Normal University, which he left as a sophomore. Although 36 years of military service and the education of his three children have intervened, he still aims for a Master of Science degree.

During his 36 years' service, Colonel Wones worked with practically every present leader of the Army Medical Service, developed a method for handling supplies which has been widely adopted by civilian concerns, and has been the dean of Medical Service Corps since it was set up in 1947 as the successor to the Sanitary, Pharmacy, and Medical Administrative Corps.

Colonel Wones is married to the former Miss Hannah Pearson of Red Wing, Minn., a onetime Army nurse. They have three children, Edward M. Wones, Jr., an ophthalmologist in Waukegan, Ill.; Mrs. Douglas E. Culver, wife of a senior pilot with Military Air Transport Service; and David R. Wones, a 1950 graduate of Jefferson High School in San Antonio and a distinguished military graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and three grandchildren.

Colonel and Mrs. Wones will make their home after his retirement at 1002 Bakewell Street, Normal, Ill.

Army Toppled by Gamecocks

Army faces Michigan this Saturday, 2 Oct., at Ann Arbor, after suffering an opening-game defeat last week-end at the hands of South Carolina.

Tied 14-14 at the half, in the game against the Gamecocks, the Cadets, lacking in depth, faltered late in the third quarter when South Carolina surged ahead for a lead which the southern eleven bolstered again in the final period.

The Cadets will be leery as they invade the lair of the Michigan Wolverines this Saturday. Army has won all four of the previous games against Michigan and the Big Ten team will have the added incentive of ending West Point's domination of the series.

Statistics for last week's game:

	S. C.	Army
First downs	24	15
Rushing yardage	446	138
Passing yardage	26	112
Passes attempted	9	22
Passes completed	3	9
Passes intercepted by	0	1

USMC Re-enlistees Below S/Sgt. Rank May Pick Duty Station Or Shift MOS'

Marines in the grade of sergeant and below who re-enlist immediately are permitted to choose their duty stations or to change their MOS'.

Under authority of Marine Corps Memorandum No. 75-54, commanding officers are permitted to grant either one of the two options.

The first option permits those who re-enlist to transfer to a new duty station or to be retained at their present station. While transfer to a particular geographical area can be guaranteed, Marine Corps Headquarters said, the option does not permit the guarantee of assignment to a specific unit or organization.

Those who re-enlist have the choice of serving at any of the following seven areas: North and South Carolina; the United States east of the Mississippi River (including the Carolinas); Southern California; the United States west of the Mississippi River (including Southern Calif.); Japan; Overseas (including Japan and Korea); or, retention at present duty station for a minimum period of six months or until the completion of 24 months, whichever comes first.

Women Marines who re-enlist, however, will not be permitted to choose service in either Japan or Korea.

Option two allows those who re-enlist to be retrained in a new occupational field from a list of three MOS' submitted by the individual. Before such change of occupational specialty is effected, however, the re-enlistees must meet the requirements necessary for the performance of duty in any new field.

The new re-enlistment policy applies to Reservists who integrate into the Regular Marines only if the Reservist has completed one year of extended active duty immediately before his integration, the Memorandum states.

Navy-Marine Promotions Under ROPA Differ Little From Present Practices

Active duty Naval and Marine Corps Reserve officers will not be affected by the new Reserve Officer Personnel Act which goes into effect next July.

The temporary promotion of Reserve officers on active duty, as well as the permanent promotion of such officers, is governed by the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 and is an integral part of the promotion system applying to Regular officers.

The present system for promoting Navy and Marine Corps Reserve officers and that contemplated by ROPA is an adaptation of the machinery of the active duty Officer Personnel Act.

Navy officials point out that "although the selection boards for Reserves on inactive duty are separate from the boards for active duty officers, an Inactive Reserve officer comes up for consideration for either temporary or permanent promotion in the same year that his active duty contemporary comes up. He becomes subject to elimination from active status on the same basis. In short, the rate of promotion and career pattern is the same, whether an officer is on active or inactive duty."

Existing law for the Navy and Marine Corps gives full credit for precedence within each grade to all time elapsed since appointment in the grade. Recommendations have been made to change this procedure but are not presently embodied in ROPA.

One section of the Navy-Marine Corps title of ROPA (Sec. 211, in conjunction with Sec. 702(f)) would bring about the conversion of the grade of commodore in the Retired Reserve to the grade of rear admiral. This feature is opposed by the Navy but will go into effect next July unless changes are adopted by Congress prior to the effective date of the Act.

As it now stands, ROPA would provide a boost in rank for approximately 15 commodores.

A summary of the Navy-Marine Corps title of ROPA follows:

Title IV

The Naval Reserve and Marine Corps Reserve

Sec. 401—Definitions

(a) This title is applicable only to the Naval Reserve and the Marine Corps Reserve.

(b) (1) "Corresponding Regular Component" means the Regular component of the Navy with respect to officers of the Naval Reserve, or the Regular component of the Marine Corps with respect to officers of the Marine Corps Reserve.

(2) "Secretary" means Secretary of the Navy.

Sec. 402—Authorized Numbers

(a) The authorized number of officers in the Naval Reserve and Marine Corps Reserve in an active status shall be 150,000 and 29,500, respectively. The actual number in an active status at any time shall not exceed these authorized numbers unless the Secretary determines that a greater number is necessary for planned mobilization requirements, or unless such excess shall result directly from the operation of mandatory provisions of this or other laws.

(b) The authorized number of officers of the Line of the Naval Reserve in active status in each of the grades below the grade of RAdm shall be a percentage of the total number of officers in active status below the grade of RAdm, as follows:

Grade	Percent
Capt	1.5
Cdr	7
Lt	37
LCdr	22
Lt (jg) and Ens.	32.5

The authorized numbers are not a requirement in any grade. When the actual number of USNR Line officers in any grade is less than the number authorized by this formula, the difference may be applied to any lower grade or grades.

Because the authorized numbers in each grade might be reduced by reason of decrease in the total number of line officers in active status, it is provided that such a reduction would not require reduction in rank or grade of any officer.

The formula for determination of maximum numbers authorized in each grade below RAdm would not be applicable to USNR officers in the staff corps, because grade distributions in the staff corps would result from the operation of an automatic principle contained in sec 403.

The maximum authorized number of USNR officers in active status in the grade of RAdm would be established at 48: 28 in the Line, seven MC, eight SC, one ChC, two CEC and two DC.

(c) The authorized number of officers of the USMCR in active status in each of the grades below the grade of BG shall be a percentage of the total number of such officers in active status below the grade of BG, as follows:

Grade	Percent
Col	2
LtCol	6
Maj	12
Capt	35
1st Lt and 2d Lt	45

When the actual number of USMCR officers in active status in any grade is less than the number which is so authorized, the difference may be applied to increase the authorized number in any lower grade or grades. No Reserve officer shall be reduced in rank or grade solely because of a reduction in an authorized number provided in this subsection. The total authorized number of USMCR officers in active status in general officer grades shall be five.

(d) The Secretary shall prescribe the number of Reserve officers in each grade who may be promoted annually. The number which shall be so prescribed for each grade shall be the number determined necessary to provide equitable opportunity for promotion among succeeding groups of Reserve officers and an adequate continuing strength of Reserve officers in an active status, and

ALLISON POWERED!

In these days of watchful vigilance, the Navy's pilotless Regulus built by Chance Vought does "triple defense duty."

Powered by Allison's J33 Turbo-Jet engine, the Regulus can be launched from submarine, surface ship or shore base.

In addition, the Regulus, in its test and drone versions, is designed to be "recoverable"—can be launched, then guided to a safe landing following completion of its mission.

The Regulus delivers maximum defense at multiple savings: (1) It can be utilized for a variety of purposes without the expense and effort of designing and building a separate missile for each requirement. (2) Its Allison engine is designed, manufactured and tested with considerable savings in critical materials and man-hours—without sacrifice of maximum reliability during its operational life.

AF Gives Oct. O.K. For 54,900 Airmen Boosts

The Air Force has told major commanders they may promote 54,900 airmen to the top five pay grades in the October quota, which is almost identical to the August authorization.

The new quota permits 800 promotions to master sergeant, 2,100 to technical sergeant, and 22,000 to airman second class, the same as in August.

The October authorization provides 10,000 spaces for promotion to staff sergeant, compared with 9,933 in August, and 20,000 to airman first class, which is set up from the 19,798 limit in the prior quota.

LT. GEN. JOSEPH SMITH (left), Commander of the Military Air Transport Service, presents to Maj. Gen. Emery S. Wetzel, Commander of the Atlantic Division MATS, the U. S. Air Force Flying Safety Award, symbol of meritorious achievement in flight safety. The award, given twice annually, covered the first six months of the current calendar year. During this period, January through June, the Atlantic Division carried out its mission without an aircraft accident of any kind. The Atlantic Division flying trans-Atlantic and Arctic trips on a regular schedule recorded 93,884 accident-free transport flying hours during this six-month period in C-54, C-118 and C-124 transport aircraft.

Lt. Col. George C. Kilmetz, USAF, has been named adjutant of the Crew Training Air Force, Randolph AFB, Tex. He replaces Col. Emory W. Cofield, USAF, reassigned to Nellis AFB, Nev., CrewTAF's F-86 Sabrejet school, as executive officer.

Gen. Douglass, Troop Transport Expert, Will Fill Inter-American Defense Billets

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, jr., USAF, Commander of the Eighteenth Air Force since it was activated in 1951, will leave Donaldson AFB, S. C., 19 Oct. to take over three key Washington posts related to inter-American defense.

He is regarded as a top Air Force authority on troop carrier and airlift operations.

Brig. Gen. Edward H. Alexander, USAF, Deputy Commander of the Eighteenth Air Force since August 1952, becomes Acting Commander on General Douglass' departure.

The Eighteenth Air Force, one of the two major units of the Tactical Air Command, is the troop carrier command of the Air Force.

General Douglass has been named Senior USAF member of the Joint Mexican United States Defense Commission. On 1 Nov., he will also become Senior USAF Delegate to the U. S. Delegation, Inter-American Defense Board, and Senior USAF member of the U. S. Delegation to the Joint Brazilian United States Defense Commission.

In the three and one-half years since General Douglass assumed command of the newly-formed Eighteenth Air Force, troop carrier aviation has made great progress. The C-46's and C-82's with which most of the Eighteenth Air Force wings were first equipped have been replaced with modern types of C-119 Flying Boxcars and C-124 Globemasters. Newer, faster and more versatile transport planes are now in production for troop carrier utilization.

An Eighteenth Air Force unit, the 314th Troop Carrier Group, was dispatched to the Far East shortly after the Korean War began, flying a heavy schedule of combat missions delivering high priority personnel, supplies and ammunition to the newly captured Kimpo Airstrip. Two weeks later, the 314th Group dropped 4,000 troopers of the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team in a daring attack behind the enemy lines at Sukchon and Sunchon. For weeks, the 314th Group supplied the surrounded 1st Marine Division at the Chosin Reservoir by airdrop alone, finally airdropping a 32-ton steel bridge which enabled the Marines to escape to the waiting fleet at Hamhung.

The Eighteenth Air Force took over the job of training a number of Air Force Reserve wings which had been recalled to active duty. Hundreds of pilots, crew members, and other key personnel of these wings, after careful training by the Eighteenth Air Force, were sent to Korean Airlift units and to Europe as individual replacements, furnishing a steady flow of trained troop carrier flyers.

Two Eighteenth Air Force wings, the 433rd Troop Carrier Wing from Greenville, S. C., and the 465th Troop Carrier Wing from Mitchel AFB, N. Y., were transferred to Europe to fly troop carrier missions. In April 1952 the 403rd Troop Carrier Wing of Portland, Oregon was transferred to the Korean Airlift in Japan, where the Eighteenth Air Force flyers did an outstanding job. Their first major mission was a spectacular 17-hour all-night airlift of a regimental combat team from Japan to Korea to stop prisoner of war riots at Kojedo Island, the unit lifted complete with personnel, supplies, equipment, vehicles, weapons and ammunition.

The major function of the Eighteenth Air Force has been to maintain America's capability for intra theater airlift and joint airborne operations against an enemy anywhere in the world. The large troop carrier planes under General Douglass' command have been utilized in airborne and airdrop delivery operations throughout the United States, and in Puerto Rico, Labrador, Greenland and Alaska, successfully dropping or airlifting up to a division in a single operation.

FOLLOWING are the names of 328 USAF captains, and 8 Medical, 4 Dental, 1 Veterinary, 9 Medical Service, 5 Chaplains and 14 Nurses in permanent captain rank who have been selected for advancement to major in the Regular Air Force. On the USAF list, the selections begin with No. 10572A and end with No. 1127A. An * before an officer's name indicates that he is a temporary lieutenant colonel;  indicates a present rank of captain; all others are temporary majors.

New high-speed twin jet plane designed for round-the-clock

photo-reconnaissance

—the Douglas RB-66

Now in production for the U. S. Air Force, the Douglas RB-66 will be one of the most versatile photo-reconnaissance planes ever designed.

Complete performance data is still restricted, but this much can now be told. Powered by twin jets, slung in pods from its sharply swept wings, RB-66 will fly in the 600- to 700-mile-per-hour class. Range will permit deep penetration for all-weather, around-the-clock photo-reconnaissance or mapping. Photographic equipment will be of the most modern to collect detailed information by day or night.

Development of RB-66 is another example of Douglas leadership in aviation. Planes that can be produced in volume to fly faster and farther with a bigger payload are a basic rule of Douglas design.

Upholding the Service. So much has happened and so much controversy has revolved around the junior Senator from Wisconsin since Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens first startled the country by throwing down the gauntlet to him that people are prone to forget the one issue then at stake. The only point then raised by the Army Secretary was his duty to protect officers of the Service from unwarranted abuse and mistreatment by Senator McCarthy or anyone else. All the rest of the controversy arose as the result of Mr. Stevens' having taken his original stand that he would not permit officers of the Army to be abused. Senator McCarthy, on his part, denied that he had mistreated Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, USA.

It is with considerable satisfaction therefore that the Services have heard the verdict of the Select Committee which has found unanimously that "the conduct of Senator McCarthy toward General Zwicker was reprehensible, and that for this conduct he should be censured by the Senate."

Despite the fact that he was too gentlemanly and entirely out of his element in the rough and tumble area where Senator McCarthy is at his best, Secretary Stevens stuck to his guns when it looked as though everyone was against him, and carried on, even though he was ill, through the pitiless grilling before the Mundt Committee. Now his view has been endorsed by all the members of both political parties on the Select Committee headed by Senator Watkins (R-Utah).

There was an additional charge made against Senator McCarthy by Senator Fulbright (D-Ark.) that the former had "without proof or other justification made an unwarranted attack upon General George C. Marshall." The Committee declined to go into this, holding that "charges concerning statements made on the floor of the Senate about public officials, with which statements we may disagree, but which, if held censurable, would tend to place unwarranted limitations on the freedom of speech in the Senate of the United States." Thus, Senator McCarthy gained immunity from being censured for his attempt to besmirch the character of one who President Eisenhower has said typifies all that we look for in an "American patriot."

The Committee pointed out that Senator McCarthy's conduct toward General Zwicker "would not have been proper in the case of any witness, whether a general or a private citizen." The point is well made, but the code of an officer does not leave open to him the means of retaliation available to a citizen. As a subordinate in a military system he cannot reply in like strong language, appeal for public support, nor employ outside legal counsel. He must rely principally on the backing of his superiors. In this instance, fortunately, the backing of Secretary Stevens was prompt and effective.

A Better Name for "Fringe Benefits"? Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson is looking for a better designation for those Service rights now generally referred to as "fringe benefits." In his recent press conference he was commenting on the problem of keeping trained men in the Services. "We have gotten crossed up," he said, "with some of our so-called fringe benefits." Then he added parenthetically, "I would like somebody to think of a better name for that."

If anyone in the Services has a better name for "fringe benefits" we suggest he send it to THE JOURNAL and we'll see that it gets to Mr. Wilson's attention.

First in Nuclear Power. The United States Navy, with the commissioning on 30 Sept. of the USS Nautilus, is now operating the only known nuclear-powered means of transportation. It is the first step toward the new age of nuclear power for civilian and industrial use as well as for transportation by land, sea and air. Its crew under the command of Cdr. Eugene P. Wilkinson, USN, is now blazing a trail that will be followed by many in future years.

Also nearing completion by the same builders,

Rank for Naval Specialists

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The "Register of Commissioned and Warrant Officers of the United States Navy," dated 1 Jan. 1954, lists 16 rear admirals in the Medical Corps and five rear admirals in the Dental Corps currently on active duty. The Navy is to be congratulated on the recognition of the importance of medicine in the Service. Each parent wants his son or daughter, while serving in the Navy, to have the best possible medical care.

To date one officer specializing in electronics has attained the rank of rear admiral while it took public pressure to effect the promotion to flag rank of an engineering officer working in the field of atomic physics. It seems that officers qualified in the two fields mentioned will be just as essential to the winning of another war as the medical doctors and dentists. Diagnosing and correcting the ills of the human body is the job of a medical officer. The diagnosis and corrective action required for the successful operation of millions of dollars worth of electronic equipment, vital to the mission of a modern naval vessel, is usually the responsibility of a white hat sailor who may or may not be supervised by an officer qualified in the specialty. Such equipment undergoes almost daily design changes.

There appears to be opposition in high quarters to the attainment of flag rank by specialists. Is not even the general practitioner in medicine (who may attain flag rank) a "specialist" in the sense that he does not generally receive "broadening" assignments entirely divorced from his field? Much lip service is given to the importance of electronics and atomic physics in modern warfare, yet in practice, neither appears to be given the preeminence it deserves as is attested by the rank structure of personnel in these fields. If high rank and incentive pay is justified by the need to make military careers attractive to medical personnel isn't the need as great in the other important specialties? The lack of a concerted and determined effort to solve the continuing and growing problem of providing the military with adequate technical personnel for these rapidly expanding related fields indicates that perhaps these fields should be administered by a separate bureau. The advent of nuclear weapons and propulsion plants emphasizes this point. It is worth noting what the Bureau of Aeronautics has done for naval aviation!

It is undoubtedly the duty of the American Physical Society, Institute of Electrical Engineers, Institute of Radio Engineers, and similar associations to prevail upon the Navy to recognize that only through science can we hope to win future wars and to make positive recommendations concerning the solution of the present grave technical personnel problem.

CONCERNED

Navy Force-Outs

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The article in your 18 Sept. issue on the possibility of increased forced attrition among 35 and 5'ers in the Navy and Marine Corps was welcome news. If it materializes it should do much to boost the morale of officers in the middle ranks, especially in the Navy.

Many of us have come to feel that senior flag officers who reach the 35 and 5 category will go right on serving in the Navy's top jobs until hell freezes over. As you pointed out, once they've been selected for retention they're "in" until they reach statutory age—sometimes as far away as five or six years.

In the meantime, of course, humps continue to build up in the ranks of commander and lieutenant commander. Navy personnel officials bemoan this sad fact and make numerous suggestions to solve the problem (as is indicated by the article in your 11 Sept. issue which reports that 2,000 are to be selected for commander to relieve the lieutenant commander hump), but, by and large, they ignore one of the most important steps which could be taken to keep promotions moving smoothly toward the top—Elimination of more 35 and 5'ers.

Flag officers who have completed 35 years of service and five years in grade surely would have little to complain about if they were forced to retire and give younger officers an opportunity to make their number.

I don't know who was responsible for writing the Navy section of the law on 35 and 5'ers, but I would say off-hand that the rule is being abused. Check over the list of senior flags and you will see what I mean. Far too many of the top admirals have 35 and 5, have been selected for retention, and will be around for several more years.

I should think the law was intended to give the Navy an opportunity to retain a few difficult-to-replace admirals whose service is too valuable to lose. However, it appears the Navy is using it to cull only three or four officers each year while retaining the vast majority.

Cdr., USN

the Electric Boat Co., General Dynamics Corp., is the USS Sea Wolf and following close behind will be the yet unnamed SSN-578 and SSN-579. In the works, but not yet authorized, is a big carrier with boundless range to be driven by nuclear power. Leading aircraft and engine firms are at work on planes for nuclear-powered aircraft.

As Admiral Robert B. Carney recently said: "It may very well be that in this 20th century, naval supremacy will go to the nation that first converts from oil to atoms." On this basis, the commissioning of the USS Nautilus marks a great step to the forefront for the U. S. Navy.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Allied aircraft in the European theater have been in action on several occasions with German jet-propelled fighters. The appearance of these fighters had been expected and their design and operational characteristics appear to follow closely the estimates which had been formed of them. Their speed and rate of climb are high but they have shown themselves to possess poor maneuverability. The U. S. AF and the RCAF announced that the development of British and American jet-propelled aircraft has made progress.

50 Years Ago—Secretary of War Taft this week delegated to Quartermaster General Humphrey full authority to supervise the construction of new buildings at West Point. Secretary Taft believes in placing such special work as this in the hands of Army specialists, and for this reason he has decided that inasmuch as he personally knows nothing about building, he will have the Quartermaster's Department take charge of this important work.

90 Years Ago—The latest advices from Atlanta report General Sherman's Army as still enjoying their much-needed rest. Leaves of absences are freely granted, and many of the sick and wounded men are receiving furloughs. The Southern papers report that the losses during the bombardment of Atlanta will reach $5 million worth of real estate, embracing 47 houses burnt. There were 497 persons killed and 557 wounded. They claim that their losses in the final engagements, resulting in the fall of Atlanta, do not exceed in killed, wounded and prisoners, 5,000 men.

O'Seas Marines Will Get Radical Buildings, Service-Wide Application Seen Likely

Elements of Fleet Marine Forces will be using revolutionary Geodesic-Dome shelters by fiscal year 1956, if current Marine Aviation plans continue unchecked by budgetary limitations. Other Services may follow suit.

According to Col. Henry C. Lane, USMC, who conducted a study of the new concept in advanced-base shelters, the Marine Corps hopes to deliver a "pilot order" of about twenty 36-foot and 50-foot dome-shaped shelters to its overseas units as early as April 1956.

During a recent demonstration at Quantico, Va., the Marine Corps exhibited several structures utilizing the Geodesic Dome principle as applied to various materials. The design most suitable for immediate application is magnesium, a light-weight, non-strategic metal. The mobility of the shelters was demonstrated when a 50-foot magnesium hangar was lifted by an HRS helicopter. "These hangars can be transported in a fully erected state at the rate of 50 miles in 50 minutes by using a helicopter to carry them. In such a move no man-hours are expended in disassembly and re-erection," Colonel Lane said.

Colonel Lane, Head, Materiel Branch, Division of Aviation, said the Marine Corps has let a contract for a 36-foot hemispheric prototype personnel shelter.

This shelter will be sent to the Marine Corps Development Center at Quantico, where it will be subjected to rigorous wind, strength, heat and other tests. After that, the structure will be sent to the field for evaluation under habitability conditions.

Colonel Lane expressed the opinion that the new type shelters will eventually have Service-wide application. "I don't see how we can get away from it," he said.

"It has less weight, less bulk, is less expensive than existing types, and will result in large savings in money and man-hours."

The Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics has already issued a design contract for a 36-foot aircraft maintenance shelter, for a 50-foot maintenance and storage shelter, and a 110-foot hangar dome which it wants delivered by November, THE JOURNAL learned.

If the Navy decides that the blueprint designs are satisfactory, and that such shelters will meet its needs, a contract will be placed for prototypes.

Colonel Lane said that Marine Corps Aviation has a need for 10 million square feet of floor space. "With today's aircraft," he said, "we can't get along without adequate maintenance shelters for the temperature extremes we can expect to encounter. These shelters promise to give us what we want with less penalties of weight, cost, and man-hour expenditures."

Maj. George J. King, USMC, a WWII and Korean War pilot, who is now on duty with the Division of Information, Marine Corps Headquarters, related that Marine Aviation was forced to operate without hangars during the Korean conflict.

"We have a great need for shelters,"

Major King said. "Our maintenance crews operated in the elements. There were times when the crews had to work in the open on planes during extreme conditions of cold, snow and rains."

"When you lessen the effectiveness of personnel working on machines," the veteran of 101 combat missions continued, "you lose lives and operating efficiency."

"It is not inconceivable," he pointed out, "that the Services will have to operate in Arctic regions in the future. And you can't work on intricate parts of an aircraft with mittens on."

A Marine Corps estimate points up the fact that millions of dollars could be saved by making use of the dome-shaped buildings, designed by Mr. Buckmaster Fuller, the leading authority in the field.

"The use of one-phase, hemispherical structures," Colonel Lane said, "promises even more spectacular savings in weight and man-hours required for construction."

A comparison of present shelter requirements and the one-phase, Geodesic-Dome concept for a single Marine Aircraft Wing, the Colonel said, "graphically reveals why prime consideration is being given to the application of this unique design principle to military structures."

	Present Concept	Geodesic Structures
Weight in Pounds	33,746,000	872,000
Erection Time, Man-hours	961,000	26,000
Cost	$5,102,000	$657,000

At present, Colonel Lane explained, the Marine Corps Aviation shelter program at advanced bases consists of three phases. First, upon occupying an airfield at an advanced base, a tent camp is set up; second, the tent camp is improved by erecting wood frames and prefabricated or improvised flooring. (This is an interim measure while awaiting the second more permanent family of shelters, consisting of semi-permanent steel, arch-rib-type buildings); and third, the semi-permanent phase. In this phase, a new site must be cleared, buildings erected and then supplies, equipment, tools and personnel moved from the tent camp to the new site.

The dome-shaped shelter is better suited functionally to Marine Aviation use than either the tent or the Quonset hut. The dome can be made large enough to provide aircraft maintenance hangars, alert ready hangars, and motor vehicle maintenance shops, none of which are available under the three-phase concept.

The adoption of this new type shelter, Colonel Lane noted, could be expected to provide "tremendous savings in shipping cube and weight, which is of primary importance in an amphibious operation."

He said that the dome-shaped shelter is also suitable for Continental base use.

Three sizes of shelters are visualized to meet Marine Corps requirements. They are: the small, 36-foot (1,000 square feet of enclosed space); the medium, 50-foot (2,000 square feet of space); and the large, 110-foot (10,000 square feet of enclosed space).

COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

France Still Holds the Key—

WITH a canny understanding of other nations' viewpoints (and the extent of their patience) the British Foreign Office this past week has struggled valiantly to speed up the processes whereby West Germany may attain full independence quickly and at the same time an integration with the defense plans for the west. At the moment of writing it is not at all sure that the British effort will get a great deal further than did our own in behalf of the now defunct European Defense Community. The barrier remains the same, French anxiety regarding what will happen in time after Germany has been allowed to rearm: will such an army face only eastward or might it, as on several previous occasions, march westward?

M. Mendès-France does not deal with the matter in those plain terms, but a heavily-armed Germany is the ghost which is always half-visible to a Frenchman. He has other worries, one of which popped into sight the very day he got into London for the past week's Nine-Power meeting (the United States, Canada, Great Britain, France, West Germany, Italy; and the three Benelux countries). This was the ancient Saar question, settlement of which a French spokesman indicated they wished before accepting the West German rearmament plan.

It is hardly necessary to restate the unhappy fact that M. Mendès-France, who in other areas has been astonishingly effective as a premier, remains the prisoner of a parliamentary coalition which can disintegrate instantly and which he must hold together by conciliation and persuasion rather than by the means which are employed by the head of a strong government.

ANOTHER CIRCUMSTANCE, often pointed out, must continuously be kept in mind, namely, that nobody can afford to lose patience with either the sometimes exasperating M. Mendès-France or his great nation. Least of all can we think of ignoring France, for it is geographically the key to the entire program of western defense.

We must have West Germany in the NATO defense line, to be sure, but we must also have France in that same organization if the defense plan is to have any realism. A mere glance at the map of our communications and depots and airbases, all in France, will suffice. We would be most ingenious if we doubted that M. Mendès-France took that glance a long time ago. We would also be most improvident if we ourselves forgot the relationships of France in the Far East, where there now are 185,000 French Union troops which, even in the present relative quiet of Vietnam, are a valuable potential.

THE FRENCH have distressed us a good deal this year, but it is yet to be shown that as a nation they are displeased either with their premier's bargaining powers or with his program. It should be noted that already he has gained from Britain a promised participation in western Europe's affairs which was not in the EDC program at all, and British participation has been sought for years by earlier French governments. We will need more time for appraisal before reaching any conclusion about the end-result of this week's cautious fencing.

IN ITALY there has been a conspicuous gain for government, in Signor Scelba's solid victory over a fierce and unscrupulous opposition headed as usual by the large Communist delegation. The Scelba government has been greatly harassed for a year by the miserable scandal surrounding the death of a young woman and her notorious association with some of Italy's gilded youths including, by chance, the son of a cabinet member. With a political dexterity known outside Italy the scandal was kept alive in an effort to pull down the entire Scelba government. Belatedly but with determination, the premier finally pressed for a vote of confidence based upon his bold and successful foreign policy as the matter really at issue. He won, and there is hope that a year-long embarrassment to a capable premier on a completely phony issue is at last ended.

SIGNOR SCELBA'S parliamentary victory was swiftly and significantly followed by indication of a diplomatic achievement of prime importance to Italy and to the West generally. This was the compromise, needing only formal completion, by which the Trieste dispute between Italy and Yugoslavia should come to an end. The remaining point at issue after prolonged negotiation between Rome and Belgrade had been the disposition of one small territorial item on the peninsula south of Trieste harbor. The compromise, it is pleasant to note, was stimulated by Robert D. Murphy, Under Secretary of State, whose mission to that region was lately mentioned in these columns.

America's interest, like Britain's, is considerable. An early result of the settlement (to which Russia, by the way, is expected to object, but ineffectively) would be the freeing of the Anglo-American garrisons of some 8,000 troops from what once had looked like permanent duty at the head of the Adriatic. If this be the end of the Trieste impasse, as dangerous as it was tiresome, it will bring comfort to the NATO planners in general, who hitherto have had to accept the handicap of an awkward gap in the West's defense line at an historically sensitive spot. The settlement will be a welcome contribution to world peace.

VIETNAM DELEGATES appeared this week at the State Department, and later at the Pentagon, to support the views of French military and economic officials on what is needed in the way of aid to that oddly situated group of orientals. There is no doubt that aid will be given, but the form which our military assistance can take is still in doubt.

A fearfully long time has been squandered since the United States was ready—under certain essential conditions which never materialized—to aid and guide the military mobilization and supply and training of Vietnam forces for their own defense. Since then Vietnam resources have been sadly diminished by the territorial partition required by the French defeat in the north, but this has increased the necessity of aid, even while increasing the problems. The recent discussions at Manila, of a defensive alliance of a sort, have further emphasized the necessity, and this week's conversations are timely.

SOUTH AMERICAN reports are of a lively interest in the American program for cooperation in atomic-power-for-industry, as proclaimed last December by the President and elucidated a week ago by Secretary of State Dulles in an unusually successful speech before the United Nations. The South American interest is in an early implementing of the plan, preferably through the United Nations but, if that program be delayed, through direct bilateral agreement. For Latin America needs power. Coal is a costly import, and adequate water-power is often either distant or practically unattainable. This is the very situation envisaged by the President and his atomic energy advisers, who see in the U.S.S. Nautilus power-plant and in others under research or development the long awaited opportunity to produce atomic "power packages" a very few years hence. The broad aim is to exchange the packages for the atomic-fuels which are known to exist in half a dozen South American countries.

Curiously the State Department has said little about its own role, but there is good report of a quick response to the overtures made at the Sao Paulo quadricentenary by America's special representative, Robert LeBaron.

MEMO

For Journal Readers

ARMY SEC'Y STEVENS' STATURE is certain to rise as a result of two developments this week: (1) the Watkins Committee Report, with specific reference to the censure recommendation against Senator McCarthy for his treatment of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, USA; and (2) disclosure at Denver, following a conference with the President, of plans to add at least 5 combat-type divisions to current Army tactical strength. It was on . . .

THE MATTER OF GEN. ZWICKER that Mr. Stevens took his stand in opposition to Senator McCarthy, though much else was brought into the heated hearings which ensued. The Secretary said flatly he would not permit military personnel to be abused. The Senator retorted that Gen. Zwicker had not been maltreated. Now comes the verdict of the Watkins Committee. It upholds the Secretary's contention. As a result, the Secretary's position has been greatly enhanced. As for the increase in Army divisions, Journal readers read . . .

FIRST DISCLOSURE of such a possibility in a front-page story in the 28 August issue. This article explained how the increase in combat divisions would be tied to division rotation and said: "Planning is still in the tentative stage, but Defense leaders already see in the division rotation proposal the hopeful prospect of squeezing additional combat divisions from available manpower." Able to claim . . .

AT LEAST SEVEN MORE COMBAT divisions than previously planned—the difference between the 17 divisions slated for the active Army on 30 June 1955 and 24—

BACKFIRE IF CONGRESS should attempt next year to slash division strength on the basis that the Army will have more so-called combat divisions than during the fighting in Korea.

ONE-SHOT CHARITY DRIVES, instead of round-the-calendar campaigns, are winning strong acceptance at Service installations. At some places, like Langley AFB, Va., a day's pay is the unofficial quota. At others, like Walter Reed AMC in D. C., the "suggested quota" is one-half of one day's pay. The base newspaper at the medical center lists objectives as at least $1 for private and PFC's; corporals, $2; sergeants, $3; SFC's, $4; and M/Sgts., $5. For W.O.'s, $5 also is suggested, with a minimum of $6 for lieutenants; $8 for captains; $10 for majors; $12 for lieutenant colonels and $15 for colonels. Where consolidated drives have not been launched . . .

OFFICERS AND NON-COMS COMPLAIN that too much time is consumed in the conduct of individual drives. Aggregate collections often are higher as a result of one campaign, rather than efforts for each group, such as the March of Dimes, Cancer Society, Red Cross, and Community Chest.

A DOMESTIC "NATIVE SON" project is in the making. Successful in replacing almost 50,000 airmen overseas with foreign nationals, the Air Force now is starting Operation "Home Front" to put civilians in many jobs now filled by military personnel. It will save men and money, but the . . .

PRIMARY IMPETUS for the "Home Front" program is the fact that the Air Force now feels it may not achieve the 33% re-up rate on which prior manpower policies had been set. This could mean, unless original enlistments rise markedly, that the Air Force will not achieve and maintain its military manpower objective of 970,000 officers and airmen.

Mr. Stevens will have a strong and positive speaking point in his increasing public appearances. It's no secret that . . .

DURING MONTHS ON END for the past year, the Army Sec'y has been tied up with issues developing from the investigations of Senator McCarthy. For this reason and because, being a party to a controversy, he could not speak freely, the Secretary was unable to declare himself boldly on behalf of Army objectives. Now, his hand strengthened, he has that opportunity.

SECDEF WILSON HAD TROUBLE at his early Pentagon news conferences distinguishing between Army tactical and training divisions. After the initial confusion was ended, the Secretary asserted repeatedly that the Army had too much overhead, which included training divisions. At times, he would emphasize his point by simply dividing strength of combat divisions and RCT's into total manpower. Now Mr. Wilson's problem . . .

WILL BE ENDED and he need no longer worry about a distinction between training and combat divisions. The timetable on announcement of the Army manpower plans was most interesting. At a news conference last week, Mr. Wilson apparently had not yet been briefed on details of the division rotation and redesignation scheme. But that fill-in followed quickly, for on Tuesday the President learned of the plans from Sec'y Stevens and Gen. Ridgway at Denver. Enthusiastic . . .

THE PRESIDENT FLASHED the green light for public disclosure. The Army Secretary and CofS held a surprise news conference at the Pentagon the very next day. The 24 combat divisions in place of 17 is certain to be popular politically. But it could . . .

"NATURAL SENTIMENTALIST"—that's the U.S. soldier, according to the Army. A newly released pamphlet on "Defense Against Enemy Propaganda" says: "The American soldier being a natural sentimentalist feels a genuine nostalgia about loved ones when he is away from home. Propagandists try to exploit this feeling by means of radio broadcasts, pamphlets, newspapers, posters, novelties and rumors." The Army pamphlet is . . .

PART OF A CAMPAIGN being developed on the basis of experience in Korea to toughen U.S. fighting men against Communist propaganda techniques. Military leaders are frank to admit that indoctrination against Red inculcation was not adequate prior to outbreak of fighting in Korea and that as a result behaviour of U.S. POW's while in the hands of the enemy left considerable to be desired. The Army pamphlet stresses . . .

THE BEST DEFENSE against enemy propaganda is "discipline and leadership supported by knowledge." Interviews with repatriated POWs have shown that it was the Communists' first order of business in POW camps to break down all concept of rank and attendant responsibility.

UNLESS THERE'S A SWITCH in present thinking, the Army will not follow the Air Force and go to a twice-a-month pay plan. The matter is under review by the Chief of Finance, but present indications are that the Army will stick to a once-a-month pay program.

ARE YOU LEAVING THE SERVICES? WHAT NOW?

Unusual career opportunities exist for young college graduates in our technical organization at Baton Rouge, Louisiana and Houston, Texas. We have openings for well qualified men in each of the following fields:

CHEMICAL ENGINEERING

Chemical engineers are wanted for work in process development and design, pilot plant studies, technical service, economic analysis and supervision of manufacturing operations. Positions are available for BS, MS, and PhD engineers. Experience desired but not required.

CHEMISTRY

Organic and physical chemists with PhD degrees are needed for exploratory research programs in our Research and Development Laboratories. Up to ten years' experience acceptable but not required.

INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING

There are a number of attractive positions in our Manufacturing Department in time and motion studies, job evaluation and wage and salary administration. These jobs offer excellent opportunities for advancement into supervisory positions in other sections of our Manufacturing Department. Applicants should have at least a BS degree in either industrial, mechanical, or chemical engineering. Experience desirable but not necessary.

Ethyl's broad manufacturing and research and development program, plus the company's on-the-job training policy, offers excellent advancement opportunities for the young engineer. If you can qualify for one of these positions—if you would like to live and work in one of the nation's most rapidly growing industrial centers—if you would like to be associated with a stable, progressive company with full opportunities for advancement in your civilian career, then forward complete information on technical qualifications and background to:

■ MAXWELL AFB, ALA. The Officers' Club here took on the appearance of a spot at the crossroads of the world when the Maxwell Officers' Wives' Club based its September program on an "Around the World" theme.

In rooms enlivened with flags of many nations, members were greeted by Spotters dressed in colorful costumes of distant lands where they had been stationed—or where their husbands had visited.

Wives of officers from other nations attending various Air University schools, were honor guests for the afternoon.

She introduced members dressed in costumes of the Philippines, Bavaria, Spain, Poland, Mexico, China, Saudi Arabia, Japan, Brazil, Holland and many other countries.

The program focussed attention on Japan, its customs and ceremonies. Mrs. Charles E. Thomas, jr., wife of Major General Thomas, commander of the 14th Air Force stationed at Warner Robins AFB, Ga., was guest speaker of the afternoon. She is a graduate of the famous Sogetsu School of Ikebana in Tokyo, and climaxed her talk with a demonstration of arranging flowers for a Japanese Tokonomo. She wore for the occasion a kimono of rich purple damask which once belonged to a lady-in-waiting at the Japanese court—thereby adding a regal note to a gay fiesta afternoon.

U. S. Coast Guard

Secretary of The Treasury — George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Merlin O'Neill

COAST Guard Headquarters calls attention to the fact that officers should request appropriate correspondence courses from the Naval Correspondence Course Center at the beginning of the preparation period for each promotion examination.

Headquarters stressed that the delay on the part of an officer to submit a request for a correspondence course will not be justification for the postponement of any promotion examination. The Commandant (PTP) should be notified immediately if a course is not available or if a second choice course was supplied.

Coast Guard text materials should be obtained from the District Commander (p); requests should not be submitted to the Naval Correspondence Course Center or to the Coast Guard Institute. The only Institute course used for promotion examinations is the Communications Officer Course.

Those who have eligible substitutes for scheduled examinations, Headquarters said, and who desire to take another test on the scheduled date should advise the Commandant (PTP).

Any officer who received a second choice course and who was authorized to take the examination on 13 September, should prepare to take on 10 Jan. 1955 the examination originally scheduled for 13 September. For example: An officer who took the Shipboard Electrical Systems examination on 13 September in lieu of the Seamanship examination should prepare to take the Seamanship test on 10 Jan. 1955.

While it is the individual officer's responsibility to comply with the provisions of Personnel Circular No. 17-53, Headquarters stated, inquiries concerning correspondence course, verification of eligible substitutions for resident courses, postponements, and other questions regarding the promotion examination program will be answered by the Commandant (PTP).

Berates Sen. McCarthy

Congressional committees. "The select committee is of the opinion that the very fact that 'the exercise of good taste and good judgment' must be entrusted to those who conduct such investigations places upon them the responsibility of upholding the honor of the Senate. If they do not maintain high standards of fair and respectful treatment the dishonor is shared by the entire Senate."

4—"The conduct of Senator McCarthy toward General Zwicker was not proper. We do not think that this conduct would have been proper in the case of any witness whether a general or a private citizen, testifying in a similar situation." The select Committee said Senator McCarthy knew before he called General Zwicker that the Army JAG had given the opinion that a court-martial of Major Peress would not stand and that General Zwicker had been directed to issue an honorable discharge to Peress.

The Committee said "The conduct of Senator McCarthy toward General Zwicker in reprimanding and ridiculing him, in holding him up to public scorn and contumely, and in disclosing the proceedings of the executive session in violation of the rules of his own committee, was inexcusable. Senator McCarthy acted as a critic and judge, upon preconceived and prejudicial notions. He did much to destroy the effectiveness and reputation of a witness who was not in any way responsible for the Peress situation."

Garrett Reports Sales
Up But Profits Down

The Garrett Corporation reports that sales during fiscal 1954 reached an all-time high of $101,158,083, but that its profit margin was down from the record high set the previous year.

The net profit of the company during the past fiscal year was $2,847,907, or a decrease of 7.7 per cent from 1953's $3,084,984, according to the corporation's annual stockholders report.

The company's backlog of unfilled orders at its manufacturing divisions currently amounts to $96-million as compared with $120-million a year ago. About 90 per cent of this backlog is for products with military end use. The decline in the backlog was due chiefly, the company said, to "delayed action by the military in line with their changed buying policies, together with the known reduction in the budget for aircraft procurement."

Prior to WW II, he designed, built and operated the changeable copy night signs seen frequently on blimps over New York. Later he acted as a flight operations observer on the German airship Hindenburg.

During WW II Mr. Crum was engineering test pilot on many of the Navy blimps built by Goodyear. Veteran of more than 5,000 hours of flying, he holds a private pilot's license as well as balloon and airship licenses.

Mr. Crum will be responsible for the sale of Lycoming military and industrial products manufactured at plants in Stratford, Conn., and Williamsport, Pa. He and Mrs. Crum will reside in Stratford.

Lockheed F-80R Record
Breaker Goes to Museum

The first Air Force jet plane to set a world's speed record is going to be enshrined in the Air Force Technical Museum at the Air Research and Development Command's Wright Air Development Center in Dayton, O.

The plane, a Lockheed F-80R, was piloted in 1947 by Maj. Gen. Albert Boyd, present WADC Commander, to a speed record of 623.8 miles per hour. The historic flight returned the record to the United States after 23 years.

The record was set at Muroc AFB, Calif. (now Edwards AFB) when General Boyd was a Colonel and chief of Flight Testing at Wright-Patterson AFB, O. However, the record set by General Boyd was broken two months later by a U. S. Navy pilot in a Douglas research plane. It also was exceeded the following year by an Air Force service aircraft, a North American F-86A flown by Maj. Richard L. Johnson.

A Lockheed F-80R also was used by Maj. Gus Lundquist, USAF, when he won the Thompson Trophy at Cleveland in 1946. Col. William H. Council, USAF, flew a F-80R on a non-stop record flight from California to New York in 1946, and a similar plane was piloted in a record run from New York to Washington in the same year. The craft piloted by General Boyd had recently been used at Griffiss AFB, N. Y., for test purposes by ARDC's Rome Air Development Center.

monly referred to as BASEC, was established on 7 November 1950, with headquarters in La Rochelle, a seacoast town located about 300 miles southwest of Paris, and 100 miles north of Bordeaux. BASEC covers an operating geographical area of approximately 400 miles north and south, by 150 miles east and west. It has grown in the past four years from three small detachments to its present three geographical districts, which include thirteen separate depots, one medical center, three seaports and five installations. Its total area of responsibility is more than twice the size of the entire Allied Occupation Zones of Germany combined, with installations dispersed over an area of 60,000 square miles.

In the initial phases, speed in establishing a working LOC was of prime importance. Troop housing had to take second place to the receiving and storage of supplies. Most of the facilities turned over to us required rehabilitation or in many cases complete rebuilding. Troops and supplies were sent over prior to the renovation, rehabilitation or construction of barracks, mess halls, warehouses and other command support facilities.

Lived in Tents

Two years after the establishment of the LOC, many of the troops were still living in winterized tents. However, construction has been progressing continuously during these four years, and today all of the troops in BASEC are housed in barracks, either permanent or temporary. PX's, Service Clubs and theatres are now located in all of the major installations.

One of our greatest problems, next to construction, has been drainage. The first two years of BASEC's history might well be called the "Battle with Mud." Two armies, the French and the German (during the German occupation) had failed to solve the drainage problem at what is now Captieux Ordnance Depot, the largest ordnance depot in Europe. Because of the peculiar impermeability of the subsoil, water cannot soak into the ground but must be drained. During the rainy season this installation was literally a sea of mud. Today our Army Engineers have successfully drained this area, and recently the Chief Ordnance Officer, U.S. Army, Europe, declared Captieux to be one of the best ordnance depots in Europe.

Base Section, as a logistical command, has been, and still is, in the process of developing its facilities to perform the mission of receiving, storing and shipping supplies destined for combat forces in the forward areas, in the event of hostilities. Forces in the field are dependent on effective logistical support. No major operation could be successfully launched or carried through without an adequate and dependable flow of essential supplies.

Four Tasks

Combat Zone supply instruction developed the four main supply tasks of a field army, requirements, requisitioning and local procurement, storage and distribution. BASEC has the same four tasks, differing only in magnitude. The great increase in the scope of the supply operation here is due to two factors. The first is volume. BASEC must not only be prepared to meet the demands of one or more field armies and of army units within the Communications Zone, but it must also meet the supply demands of other services, allies, and/or civilians as directed by higher authority. BASEC must be prepared to meet supply demands of field armies and other users within days.

Today, our storage facilities, while not yet completed, are adequate to insure the accomplishment of this important part of our mission. However, no matter how many items of quartermaster, signal, engineer, or ordnance supplies we have on hand, to get these supplies over the French roads and through French villages we must have the full support and cooperation of the French people.

"IN THE EYES OF FOREIGN PEOPLE, YOU ARE A MIRROR REFLECTING EVERYTHING THE UNITED STATES LOOKS LIKE AND STANDS FOR. BY YOUR APPEARANCE AND ACTIONS, SO IS YOUR COUNTRY JUDGED. IN THESE TIMES IT IS VITAL THAT WE HAVE FRIENDS AND ALLIES. YOU CAN STRENGTHEN OUR SECURITY BY CONDUCTING YOUR-SELVES AT ALL TIMES IN A MANNER THAT WILL WIN RESPECT OF THOSE WITH WHOM WE LIVE AND WORK, AND THUS ACTUALLY DEMONSTRATE THAT OUR TYPE OF DEMOCRACY OFFERS THE MOST TO ALL MEN."

Placards bearing the above message occupy a prominent place in our Officers' and Enlisted Men's Clubs, dayrooms and bulletin boards. We are in France today under unusual circumstances. We are not here as co-belligerents, engaged in active hostilities. Neither are we an army of occupation. We are in France in peacetime, at the invitation of the French and with the freely given consent of their government and people. Hence, we are literally pioneering in a new field of international relations and international cooperation.

As the welcome guests of France, our mission here, next to the actual performance of vital military duties, is cultivating and cementing cordial relations with the people of this country.

Reds Busy

When American troops first arrived in France, the Communist minority was very active. Hand-drawn slogans appeared on walls, and were painted on American cars—"U. S. GO HOME." It was not safe to leave an American car in the street overnight in some localities. Tires were slashed, windows broken, and aerials snapped off. A vigorous campaign to improve Franco-American relations became one of our primary missions. Troops were given orientation lectures, drivers received a special course of instruction, dependents were furnished mimeographed pamphlets acquainting them with the peculiarities of French laws and customs, and both on-duty and off-duty French classes were started.

Staff officers were encouraged to work with their counterparts in the local French governments. For instance, the Provost Marshal and the "Commissaire de Police" work very closely together. The U. S. Army Engineer and the "Genie," the Fire Marshal and "Chef des Pompiers" and of course the Commanding Officer and the "Prefet" all work together to solve our mutual problems.

In May 1952, the 279th Army Band was activated. It has given public concerts throughout Base Section, and in no case has anything but appreciation been shown. Some communities hesitated at first to grant permission for these concerts, fearing hostile demonstrations, but now the band is in great demand. A quintet of Negro soldiers, "The Spirituallaires," became so popular that they were transferred full-time to Special Services, and spent most of their time on the road giving public appearances.

These activities have paid off better than we could have anticipated. Communist incidents have almost died out in cities in the vicinities of our troop installations. Two Communist newspapers have gone out of business due to lack of subscribers. It is very seldom now that an American car is damaged, and the only remaining "U. S. GO HOME" signs are fading out.

French Employees

Over 4600 French employees have been hired by the Army to perform the various jobs necessary in receiving, storing and maintaining records of supplies at the depots. A number have been hired as drivers of trucks, sedans and busses, thus releasing soldiers for other duties. These French employees are known as LWR's because they are hired at the local wage rate, which is considerably lower than the money earned by the American soldier. This benefits not only the American taxpayer, as it amounts to a considerable savings in wages, but it is also of great help to the French economy, since many of these Army employees would otherwise be unemployed.

A major mission assigned to BASEC is the Off-shore Discharge Exercise, ODEX. This training exercise provides valuable experience in learning and applying methods for the discharging of troops and cargo from ships anchored at sea. All of these exercises are performed without the use of piers, docks, or other harbor facilities, under simulated wartime conditions. Transportation Corps' latest experimental vehicle, the BARC, was

Other technical services have profited by these exercises, since the Medical Corps, Signal Corps, Military Police, Quartermaster, Engineer and Ordnance Corps all join efforts during an ODEX. New USMC Hand-Seal

To be Issued to Field

All organizational hand-seals now in use throughout the Marine Corps are obsolete and can no longer be used for authentication of official documents, Marine Headquarters announced this week.

A new hand-seal, designed to conform with the seal made official at a White House ceremony on 22 June, soon will be issued to the field, with the exception of FMM organizations smaller than the regiment or the group. In the case of FMM organizations, however, an exception will be made in the case of separate or detached battalions or squadrons.

At present, the Marine Corps is redesigning the collar and cap insignia to bring it in line with the new seal. After the devices are approved by the Commandant, they will be issued to Marine Corps personnel as the old ones wear out. There will be no charge for an initial issue of the redesigned collar and cap insignia.

A description of the official Marine Corps seal appeared in THE JOURNAL of 19 June, front page.

shall not cause the number of Reserve officers in active status in any grade to exceed the number authorized in this section for that grade.

Sec. 403—Application of Other Laws

All laws now existing or hereafter enacted relating to the selection for promotion of an officer of the corresponding regular component shall apply to an officer of the reserve component, except as otherwise provided in this Act or except as may be necessary, in the discretion of the Secretary, to adapt such provisions to the reserve component. The relationship between officers of the line and staff corps of the USNR shall conform to that prescribed for line and staff officers of the Regular Navy in respect to a determination of the number of staff officers which may be recommended for promotion.

Sec. 404—Provisions Regarding Running Mates

(a) While in the grade of Lt(jg) or in a higher grade to which initially appointed, each USNR officer shall have a running mate of the same grade who shall be the Line officer on active duty on the lineal list of the Navy next junior to him.

(b) While in the grade of 1st Lt, or a higher grade to which initially appointed, each USMC officer shall have a running mate of the same grade who shall be the line officer of the Regular Marine Corps next junior to him.

(c) A Reserve officer assigned a running mate at any time subsequent to the initial assignment provided in subsec (a), (b) or (f) of this section, shall be assigned such running mate in accordance with the principle prescribed by law for the assignment of running mates of the staff corps of the regular Navy, except that whenever possible such running mate shall be the line officer on active duty on the lineal list of the Navy or Marine Corps next junior to him, in accordance with the principle expressed in subsections (a) or (b) of this section.

(d) In the application of subsec (a), (b) and (c) of this section, running mates shall be officers who by law are not restricted in the performance of duty.

(e) A woman Reserve officer shall have as her running mate a woman officer of the corresponding regular component.

(f) A Reserve officer who has been assigned a running mate under laws in effect on the effective date of this Act, shall continue to be considered for the purposes of this Act with that running mate, unless assigned a new running mate under the provision of subsec (c) of this section.

(To be concluded next week)

Navy Selects 1807 Cdrs; 159 Are USNR

One of the largest groups of Navy officers ever to be selected for promotion to commander under the Officer Personnel Act was approved late this week by President Eisenhower.

The new three-stripe-selectees number 1807, only 93 short of estimates made by THE JOURNAL in an exclusive story last month.

Following the President's signature, Navy officials disclosed statistics on the selections, which include both Regulars and active duty Reserves.

These show that more than 1,500 of the officers are in the unrestricted Line and include 523 temporary officers of the Regular Navy and 159 Naval Reservists.

Unrestricted Line selections totalled 403. They include 37 aeronautical engineering duty officers, 79 engineering duty officers, 13 special duty officers and 175 limited duty officers.

Included in the Regular promotion zone were all eligible lieutenant commanders, counting some who had not yet completed four years in grade at the time the board was convened on 17 August.

One unofficial reason advanced by Navy spokesmen for the large number of selections was the desire of personnel planners to relieve some of the "hump" pressure in the rank of lieutenant commander.

Almost half (approximately 700) of the group will be promoted to their new rank in an initial increment and given dates of rank of 1 July 1954.
